Green Results

Hangers Cleaners initially came to life when Owner Joe Runyan became dissatisfied with cleaning materials on the market and turned to a green concept, utilizing CO2 that would revolutionize the industry. "I was hooked," said Runyan. "So, I started a green dry cleaner." Shortly thereafter, Runyan opened the first eco-friendly dry cleaning business in Kansas City of its kind.

Green Successes

Although Runyan has not been able to measure specific green results, it is clear that grēnk has played a vital role in his business and promotion of green initiatives. "It is just a part of our overall effort. Our employees and guests see that we are 'walking the talk' when it comes to green," Runyan said.

Progress & Future Goals

While most businesses have been forced to drastically change tactics in response to less than ideal economic conditions, Hangers Cleaners has experienced anything but a slump. The business actually saw revenue growth and Runyan credits strong company fundamentals. "The fact we are green, is just icing on the cake!"
